

Method and Apparatus for Generating Structured Documents for Various Presentations

Abstract

5 The use of identifiers in user-defined document type definitions is disclosed for converting unstructured documents to structured documents. The identifiers in user-defined document type definitions are used to associate selected objects or group objects in the unstructured documents so that association information of the selected objects or group objects can facilitate 10 the generation of files in a markup language suitable for presentations on various media.